It is a world that is interspersed with a dark land of chaos, called Char, and is the only country still being ruled by the Elden King. Because the Lands Between is not controlled by Char, it has become a safe refuge for monsters that have escaped the hand of Char. They spread throughout the region over time, causing an imbalance in the Power balance between "good" and "evil". In the case of the Elden Ring, the reason for setting up our headquarters in the Lands Between was to combat these monsters and stop their flow into the Char lands, but we realized that the only method to accomplish this was to become someone that the monsters feared. Having made up our minds to establish the world's power, we chose to become a god that monsters feared. To that end, we decided to attack Char and take over the world as the Elden King. After gaining control of the Chaos Land in the beginning, we slowly started to steal the magic of the people who had lived

ENJOYMENT RATING: How the stars shine How the stars shine... Hints for [BestGrog]: There are a lot of areas where you can save your game. If you save your game at the forge, you can get back to it at that spot by going to the map and just searching for your previous path. The greyed out section has "Lessons" and other of your perks which are randomly generated when you level up. If you are playing on a high difficulty, you want to keep an eye on your damage, and when you are dealing really high, go for enemy souls. You can take them back and use them at any time. Always follow up on an enemy with the same weapon type. Eg: follow up an axe with an axe, a sword with a sword, etc Watch for rare random pets. If you see one, collect it and keep it until it is revived, you can save that next time and keep it. All the loot that you get from the dead bodies is put in your inventory, but when they revive it disappears, but don't worry they pick up all the equipment they have as a ghost. When you do find a way out of a area, make sure you save your game before you walk out. When you talk to someone for the first time, and if you are going to fight, follow up with a melee attack. First Aid is good for ailments from enemies, and it can be revived, but not as a ghost. The skill points available are per level. You get 20 of each skill in your first level, and 20 more in your second level, etc. AI is a random chance of what an enemy will do. It will act as a human would, but I don't know what each skill does, or what combination will make an enemy do this. The skill points are not your own, but those of your mother. If she dies, you lose all of your skill points. Whenever you kill an enemy, keep him in your inventory to resurrect him at any time.
