FreeClip Crack+

FreeClip is a clipboard manager that allows you to copy simultaneously up to 4 blocks of the various data. Being different from other paste managers, FreeClip provides : - fast methods to get access to the 4 blocks : by hash code, by name (with dedicated method to ask FreeClip for a clipboard name) or by type (by adding to FreeClip objects of a predefined type). FreeClip try to provide the best solutions to copy data on the clipboard and to get access to the copied data. It can display a clipboard name in order to make visible the clipboard on which data are copy. - auto-save the clipboard content in order to be available at program exit. - automatically save the clipboard content on the hard disk at program exit or at next startup. - partially auto-load the clipboard content, at application launch, by detecting auto-saved clipboard content. - ability to specify a data type for which FreeClip will ask for a clipboard name and a clipboard type. - ability to disallow FreeClip to change the clipboard contents when you copy. - all methods to get access to the clipboard data are using the same workflows when you want to get access to that clipboard. For example when you need to get a clipboard name, you will also use the same way to get a name for a clipboard type, or when you want to get all the clipboard contents, or when you want to get just the last copied item... - the clipboard contents are saved in the same format as the clipboard itself. For instance, you can copy a plain text, HTML text or anything else. - you can search for any data on your clipboard history (or only for a specified ones). For instance you can search for a single word or expression. - clipboard data in FreeClip can be: - plain text : you will have access to the plain text contents. FreeClip will be able to get the (encoded) plain text content of the clipboard data if no plain text data type has been added to FreeClip. - HTML text : you will have access to the HTML document presented on the clipboard, if one has been pasted. - another text data type added to FreeClip, e.g. "txt", "rtf", "doc", "pdf",... - another data type added to FreeClip, e.g. "plain", "html", "pdf",... -
