Decide what you want to change. The options for File > Create > Conversion depend on the type of conversion you want to create. If you are converting a file in a format other than PDF, you'll see a similar dialog box. For example, in Word, you would click File > Export > Other to export the document as a Word document. To export the document as a PDF, you would click File > Export > PDF . For more information about the accessibility features of your PDF reader, you can examine the PDF 1.5 specification, which Adobe authored, and then look at the file named, \"UserAgent and aclsection.pdf\". You can also visit the Adobe Acrobat Accessibility Toolkit. Word documents are converted into PDF files, which are very different from the original content. The original Word document is converted to a collection of cross-referenced PDF pages, where each reference is to another page in the document. The page numbers of the original document are not preserved. If this sounds like a good idea, it is. You can also modify the underlying structure of the PDF file. You can change the file properties to make it easier to navigate using web browsers, email applications, text editors, etc. But, if you do change these properties, be sure that you have your original PDF file available for comparison. This process will vary depending on the software you use. In this example we are going to change the title and page number. You can add 3D images to the PDF document. This will allow you to create objects and animations, and even create new 3D PDFs. Keep in mind that not every printer is compatible with every 3D file.
