One of the key complaints about the Web has always been the inability for people to see the images and interact with them in a way that has not been possible in the past. Adobe's Photoshop software brings this to the web and to mobile devices, allowing users to preview images and manipulate them anywhere anytime. This gives web page developers and designers more options and flexibility, and allows consumers to interact with images on their own time, in the comfort of their own homes, increasing the likelihood of them returning to a site they created.

With JavaScript being used to crop, rotate and even transform images, it is now possible to use these tools to manipulate and transform images in your browser. When it comes to the kind of improvements and customizations that people have been requesting about the Web for years, Adobe is leading the way. Adobe's Web technology team has created a new API for transforming images called web design technology. This technology allows developers to manipulate images in a more elegant and understandable manner, each via JavaScript APIs for one-time actions and persistent interactions. Targeted crop and scale tools, as well as image transformation effects, are already live products in the market. Use Lightroom to save time in the editing process, from the moment you first shoot. Use Touch tools to adjust exposure, quickly identify your subject, and create smart presets to get going as quickly as possible. Speed up what you do in Lightroom by using the integration with Photoshop to perform many common edits and raw processing steps.
